LITURGY CORNER

What Was Wrong With The Less Formal, More Conversational Style Translation Of The Roman Missal We Have Been Using Since Vatican II?

A more exact, literal translation of the official Roman Missal from Latin into English is important for several reasons:

1. The language of this revised translation will be more similar to that which we hear in Sacred Scripture. Thus, connections between the Scriptures and the Mass texts will be easier to recognize and understand their deep significance.
2. Many of the original phrases used in Latin were altered or lost in the earlier English translations. The revised English translation will bring us closer to the translations used by many other cultural and language groups and will help to connect us linguistically to other Catholics throughout the world.
3. The English versions of many of our liturgical texts are used as the base language by a number of other countries to guide their own translations. Therefore, it is important that our English texts be as precise and as close as possible to the original and official Latin text of the Roman Catholic Church.
4. There is a great Latin expression used in the Church: “Lex orandi, lex credendi” – “the law of prayer is the law of belief.” It is important for us to understand the truth of this expression. The words we use in worship shape our beliefs. They shape how we view our relationship with God and how we situate ourselves in relationship to God. And so, it is very important that we consider very carefully the words that we use in worship, because the words we use have a big influence in what we end up thinking, believing, and living out in our life. Therefore, our English translation needs to be authentic and accurate in order to convey the highest quality message possible.
